Daycare, organic wipes, dead bodies, extreme coupon-ing, new romances.

You know it was another fun-filled forensic hour on Bones this week with " The Bump in the Road ."

I knew the episode was going to be good the minute it started with Booth holding Christine while Brennan packed her baby bag for daycare. If there's one thing I like more than seeing Brennan pregnant with Booth fussing over her, it's seeing these two as parents.

How funny was it to find out what lengths Booth and Brennan had gone to to make sure Christine was in good hands? Booth used the FBI database to request the daycare directors transcripts, while Brennan practically blackmailed her into sending a photo of Christine every half hour!

Perhaps my favorite scenes were the ones in which some member of the Jeffersonian team commented on how beautiful their daughter was, and Brennan constantly asserted that she was going to be beautiful and smart when she was older, and Booth, ever the proud parent, just kept saying "Look at her!"

Christine has got some high expectations to live up to. But if there's one thing we can know, it's that she will likely meet or exceed the high standards of her parents.

That said, it seems Michelle had a bit of a run-in with Cam's dating standards this week. Did anyone else not expect that Michelle and Finn would hit it off?

It's not that I don't love the idea to death, I just wouldn't have entertained the possibility of it. I really liked Finn as a character when he appeared earlier on in the season , so I'm more than happy to have him back.

Other highlights from the episode:

- Brennan texting the daycare director a picture of the dismembered body.
- Booth and Brennan stopping to pick things up at the store in the middle of arresting a perp.
- learning about the dangers of extreme coupon-ing.
- Learning Agent Shaw is a mom with a three-year-old named Danny.
- Brennan becoming an emotional mess over missing Christine while she's at work.
- Brennan vowing to sneak Christine into the lab.

So, are you a fan of the new Finchelle ? Do you have a better shipper name? Let me know!
